Dear Saints,

Welcome to All Saints’ History Month! Throughout the course of the next four weeks we will celebrate all that this remarkable church community has achieved and born witness to over the past 117 years, from an original wooden structure on West Peachtree to an entire city block. All Saints’ has proudly walked the talk of our faith as followers of Jesus in all manner of ways, and we are well known and loved in this city because of that faithfulness and commitment to Atlanta. We do not want to stay in the past, however, and wish to enjoy this month’s trip down memory lane as a source of inspiration for our work of discernment about the future of our block that I hope we will all engage in through the course of this year. For now, I invite you listen to and share a story of the saints of God, faithful and bold and true.

Peace,

Simon+

For more information about History Month at All Saints’, please visit futureofourblock.org.

One of our former clergy at All Saints’ wrote a note to me the other week thanking me for being the guardian of a community that is cherished in her heart. It is an incredible privilege for me to follow such talented clergy and staff, and the extraordinary array of parishioners who have called our church home over its nearly 117-year history. There is so much that we might raise up as we celebrate our story. Some of it is well-known, while other elements are a little more tucked away in the archives of the parish.

As I have come to learn more about our history, I have enjoyed discovering the ways by which themes continue to intertwine. From the theater in Egleston championed by Willis Memminger, rector from 1910 to 1937, to one act plays performed in the Ross Room today, a space named after another kind of actor, Frank Ross, rector from 1961 to 1980, whose stage extended his distinctive voice in the pulpit out into the public square and Atlanta’s part in the civil rights struggle.

I hope, as we all immerse ourselves in our shared story this ‘All Saints’ History Month’, that you will find a place in time that speaks especially to you. Please do look for opportunities to tell and hear the record of the past throughout January and beyond as we prepare our hearts and minds for our vision work ahead.

With thanksgiving for the life we share,
All Saints’ Episcopal Church is a parish in the Diocese of Atlanta.
